COURSE GUIDELINES & EXPECTATIONS

There are a few components to this course and, as a blended night-class, it will be important to pay attention to the class schedule.

Class Time: There will be two hours of class per week, on Tuesday evenings from 5:30-7:30pm. That time will be used for in-class lecture when the weekly topic requires close instruction and, alternately, will be used for in-class discussions and testing. This is a blended class so the expectation is that there is additional but flexible work required of your outside of the two hours of weekly class time.

Lectures: Weekly lectures will be presented during class time, will use the white-board for diagrams and explanations, and will give you an opportunity to ask questions about the content. Lecture material will also be available online for you to read and use for studying purposes. As a result, there is no textbook required for this course.

Discussions: There will be three in-class discussions this term and they will take place during our Tuesday evening class on October 8th, November 12th and November 19th. These discussions will require you to have read the material provided in advance, to have prepared notes and points for discussion, to discuss the topic in small groups, and to turn in your contributions at the end of class. For these discussions, AI content generation is allowed – it is helpful to organize the material and generate your questions.

Assignments: There are nine assignments in the course. Each one contains exercises to familiarize students with environmental issues, government and non-profit web sites, and the tools of geographic analysis. Due to their use of Internet information, these assignments will be done remotely. Labs will have assigned due dates and it is expected that each student submits their own work – either online or in-person.

Tests: There will be three tests this term, the first one on Tuesday, October 1st, the second will be on Tuesday, November 5th, and the final one will be on Tuesday, December 3rd – all during our regular class time, 5:30-7:30. Each test will have a selection of short-answer, multiple-choice, and short essay-type questions. Attendance is mandatory and the tests will be in-person. If you fall sick or find yourself unable to attend the exam due to calamity, you must notify the instructor in advance of the exam.

Late Assignment Policy: Each assignment will be due in-class on Tuesday, or electronically by the specified date and time. If you are submitting your assignment in-person, you have a week grace period – I must receive it before the marked assignments are handed back the following Tuesday. If you are handing in electronically and you missed the closing date, you may print your assignment and hand it in the following class. Emailed assignments will not be considered.

Cheating: I will assign a zero-grade to any assignment submitted that uses another person’s work directly. That includes copying from another person, copying from a website, or copying from an AI content generator. Because it is time consuming to handle cheated assignments, the balance of proof that you didn’t cheat will fall to you – if I flag your assignment for cheating, you will have the opportunity to speak to me before the zero grade is finalized and you will need to prove you didn’t copy your answer. I will determine that by asking you a series of verbal questions about the answer you provided and the broader topic it was exploring.

STUDENT RESPONSIBILITY

As such, each student will display a positive work ethic, assist in the preservation of College property, and assume responsibility for their education by researching academic requirements and policies; demonstrating courtesy and respect toward others; and respecting expectations concerning attendance, assignments, deadlines, and appointments.
