COURSE GUIDELINES & EXPECTATIONS

There are several different components to this course

Lectures: The weekly in-person lectures will cover a variety of natural events and how their occurrences potentially threaten humans and their settlements. The classroom whiteboard and PowerPoint slides will be used to explain the mechanisms and potential impacts of each of these natural phenomena and there will be electronic notes and links to supplement the face-to-face lecture.

D2L: D2L is Camosun's learning support software and it allows you to access lecture notes, electronic lab exercises, hand in your assignments digitally, track your mark, and be alerted to upcoming due dates or changes in assignments. It is advantageous to login to the course D2L site at least weekly to ensure you are on track with your learning.

Labs: There will be ten lab exercises assigned this term. These activities are designed to practically apply some of the tools of hazards assessment. Due dates will be one week from the date the lab is assigned, unless otherwise specified, and your completed assignment can be uploaded to the 'Assignments' section of D2L or handed in at the start of lab class each week. Late assignments will not be accepted once marked assignments have been handed back.

Event Timeline: At the end of September, I will ask you to begin creating an event summary for an assigned natural disaster or catastrophe that has happened in the last century. You will then prepare a well-written, tightly edited summary including an appropriate photos and links that will due by mid-November.

Exams: There will be three tests in this course; the first will be on Wednesday, October 2nd, the second will be on Wednesday, October 30^h, and the third will be on Wednesday, December 4th. Each test will contain a series of short answer, true or false, multiple choice and long answer questions that will cover the lecture and lab content of the course. You will be provided with online lecture quizzes so that you can practice in advance of the tests.

Independent Work: When completing an exam or lab assignment, it is essential that you complete it honestly, by yourself, without assistance from AI tools or copying directly from another person. You are permitted to use web and/or written resources to complete assignments, but please use your own words and be sure to reference your sources. Any non-compliance with these instructions may result in the invalidation of assignment or exam results and may result in academic penalty under Camosun's student conduct policies.
