Peter Drucker, a management writer and practitioner, observed that "business firms have only two major functions - innovation and marketing."

This course explores what marketing is and how it is carried out in business firms and other types of organizations. It also examines the role marketing plays in influencing an organization's innovative efforts. The point of view expressed in the course is that the most successful organizations over the long term are those that are determined to find the right customers and serve the needs of these customers well. The primary task of marketing is to help firms select the best customers and then satisfy their needs/wants at a profit.

MARK 110 is designed to help those going into non-marketing fields by providing a good understanding of the role marketing plays in organizations and the relationship it has with other business functions. It is also intended to give a solid grounding in marketing basics for students who want to pursue more advanced marketing studies.

This is a demanding course. Be sure to read assigned chapters and take part in the course discussions. You are highly encouraged to provide your input by asking questions and contributing from your experience
