The mid term is worth 20% and the final is worth 25%. The mid term is slated for February 25th and the final will take place during the final exam week.

2. Homework (10%)

At various times in the semester you will be asked to complete homework activities. Your homework needs to be done as it is the foundation for some small group or large group discussion. It needs to be brought to class and therefore becomes a participation mark. If you do not come to class and do not bring in the homework (assume it will be collected) then you cannot receive a participation mark.

Can you relate on a personal level? Can you make connections to other course material you have been introduced to?

3. Once you have completed your reflection, be sure to read each other's reflections and share any meaningful comments you would like to make (no debate or criticisms). I ask you that you comment on a minimum of two classmates reflections within one week after the due date (counts as part of your grade). Feel free to respond to those who have responded to your own post.

4. Annotated Bibliography (25%)

Due date: February 18th (the one week extension is over Feb. 25th at the start of class). No written assignment will be accepted after this extension date and time. See me before the 11th if there is something I need to know or be aware of!

The writing assignment for this course is to prepare an annotated bibliography. You have 3 choices for a topic area. Choose only one! Please see me with your topic idea before commencing your research.

- theoretical explanations for juvenile delinquency and / or youth offending or

- current and critical issues related to youth justice in Canada

or

- future trends in social responses to youth crime and / or to youth justice

What is the purpose of an annotated bibliography?

- a. To encourage you to think critically about the content of the works you are using, their place within the discipline of criminal justice, and their relation to your own research and ideas
- b. To prove you have read and understood your sources
- c. To establish your work as a valid source and you as a competent researcher
- d. To help interested researchers determine whether they are interested in your topic by providing background information

What is the format or structure of an annotated bibliography?

Cover page

Title: "An Annotated Bibliography: _____"

Follow the guidelines found in the "Writing Reference Manual for the Criminal Justice Program" for formatting the title page.

Introduction (heading in bold)

In the first paragraph of your introduction answer these questions:

- What is the purpose of the assignment?,
- What is the topic you are examining (be very specific)? For purposes of this assignment you want a very specific topic, one with very few literature resources. You might want to pose a research question: Is there a correlation between parenting styles and youth violence? Do aboriginal young offenders have differing treatment needs than non-aboriginal young offenders?
- Why are you examining this topic (be very specific)? Think about what you want to answer and what it is you curious about.

In the second paragraph of your introduction answer these questions:

- How many annotations are you providing?

- Why did you choose these ones (be very specific)?
- How did you find the sources - the studies, books, publications, dissertations, reports, etc? Did you use repositories, google advanced, www databases, library on line or off line data bases, etc?

The Body of your Annotated Bibliography

Citation for the first annotation (in APA style)

Use the exact citation of the reference being reviewed. That is author's last name, then first initial ... date, title, etc.

Follow the guidelines found in the "Writing Reference Manual for the Criminal Justice Program" for formatting citations.

Summary (heading in bold type)

Under this heading you are summarizing the content of the source.

Give an overview of the arguments and evidence presented in the work and note the conclusions drawn by the author(s). You are giving general information on the kinds of questions or issues addressed in the reading.

If it is a book, dissertation or report, start by examining the chapter headings or table of contents; If it is a study, then pay most of your attention to the introduction and the discussion. Stay as objective as possible in this section as your judgement are reserved for the analysis section.

This section will likely be two paragraphs in length (1/2 page).

Analysis (heading in bold type)

Here you will be critically evaluating the person(s) or source.

In the first paragraph answer the following:

- Who wrote this?
- What are their credentials?
- Have they written on this topic before?
- Would you consider them an expert? (why or why not)
- What seems to be the position / agenda of the writer (are they writing for a particular organization)?

In the second paragraph answer the following:

- How is this reading useful to your topic?
- Who is the intended audience of this work?
- How does this work compare or contrast with another or other works you have cited?

Conclusion (heading in bold type)

Your conclusion is a reflective exercise. Think critically as you answer these questions.

Answer the following questions:

- How difficult or easy was it to find your sources? Be specific.
- Do you think there might be more relevant sources you have overlooked because of the search methods you used? Explain.
- What do you think about the quality of the articles you have summarized with respect you're your specific topic? Were some too vague? Too broad? Too Redundant? Irrelevant?
- How would you rate the quality of the authors with respect to expertise and background? (draw an overall conclusion)

Gentle reminders:

- ☞ Typed, numbered pages, 1 inch margins, line spacing at 1.5 or 2, 12 font Times Roman or Arial
- ☞ Proof your work for spelling, grammar, missing pages
- ☞ Use full sentences and paragraphs without bullets, dashes or other indications of point form
- ☞ Some cautions about your source: If you use an internet source, ensure the web site and the specific page you are looking at is not a press release, news story, or an abstract.
- ☞ Ensure your topic (thesis statement / question you want answered) is very specific! For example do not ask, why do youth join gangs? Instead, a more specific question would be: What role do friends play in whether or not a youth joins a gang?

Evaluation of your annotated bibliography

- "A" range: the summaries demonstrate a well articulated insight and understanding of the references; the analyses demonstrate your effort to thoroughly answer the questions; the introduction and conclusion are detailed and demonstrate an effort to answer every question; you include 5 references that are specific to the topic identified in the introduction; have very few spelling and grammatical errors; a clear and easy to understand writing of writing; your citations are presented correctly and formatting is correct.
- "B" range: you include 4 references that are specific to the topic identified in the introduction; the summaries demonstrate clear insight and understanding of the references (more general terms or with brevity as compared to the "A" range); the analyses demonstrate your effort to thoroughly answer the questions; the introduction and conclusion may be more general / brief / vague; you might have a few more spelling and grammatical errors; the formatting may have a few errors, or some of the citations are incorrectly stated.

- “C” range: you include 3 references that are specific to the topic identified in the introduction; the summaries demonstrate unclear or vague insight and understanding of the references; the analyses demonstrates some effort to answer the questions; the introduction and conclusion are likely more general /brief /vague and you do not demonstrate an effort to answer every question; the formatting may be incorrect, your writing likely needs attention (over 10 errors).
- “D” range: you include 2 references that are specific to the topic identified in the introduction; see “C” range for other criteria.
- “F” range: you include 1 or fewer references that are specific to the topic identified in the introduction; see “C” range for other criteria.
