2. Intended Learning Outcomes

Through reading textbooks and primary source materials, hearing faculty lectures, participating in seminars, writing papers, making presentations, and performing tests, students will:

1. Gain an international perspective on critical themes, events, and issues of this period, including modernization, westernization, war and Cold War, revolution and counter-revolution, economic development and barriers to it, economic systems such as capitalism and socialism, ideologies and ideological conflict, national culture and the impact on it of global culture and economics, colonization and decolonization, technological change and its impact on society, and the human impact on the world environment.
2. Reassess and challenge Western perspectives on critical events and issues of this period, such as those mentioned above.
3. Compare, contrast and integrate Western and non-Western outlooks and perspectives on critical events and issues of this period, such as those mentioned above.

By the end of the course, through exposure to the above materials and ideas, the student should be able to:

1. Think critically about historical issues and writing by evaluating the arguments put forward by historians, weighing the evidence they present and making judgments about the strength of their arguments.

2. Appreciate history as a distinct academic discipline, understanding its unique outlook, scope and methods and what distinguishes it from other disciplines.
3. Use history to confront the issues of today's world, establishing a context for the present and comprehending the accomplishments, failures, tensions and issues of the present era.
4. Have increased skills in research, writing and written and oral communication.

3. Required Materials

Richard Goff, et. al., The Twentieth Century and Beyond: A Global History (New York: McGraw Hill, 2008) 7th edition
History 108 Reading Package 2010 edition. .

4. Ground Rules

- Fairness to all requires that I stipulate that students will not be allowed to do “extra work” to make up for poor grades on any one assignment or combination of assignments.

- I do not “lecture to the textbook.” If you want to know how the historians Richard Goff, et.al, the authors of your textbook, assess a particular historical issue, I encourage you to read the textbook. (In any case, you’ll be tested on it.) I might well have a different interpretation from them. My goal in the lecture is both to provide basic information about the events of the past and to acquaint you with some ways to understand those events.

- This course requires you to read regularly. Some weeks there’s even a fair amount of reading. Don’t fall behind. This especially applies to the textbook.

- While I allow laptop computers in lectures, I expect that you will use them to take notes on them, not surf the web, email friends, etc. In discussion sessions, where the focus is on participation, I do not allow the use of laptops.

5. Desire 2 Learn (D2L) component

Each of you has access to Desire 2 Learn, Camosun College’s Learning Management System, which will be used for several aspects of this course. You’ll submit your essay and discussion questions through the Dropbox function in D2L; you can use D2L to view grades, including the weekly discussion participation grade. Lecture outlines will also be there. And you can use it to keep up with news about the course.

Signing in to D2L: Once you’re registered in this course, use your computer to go to the following web location: <http://online.camosun.ca> The sign-in process is simple and is described on the opening page of the D2L site.

6. Discussions

Beginning on January 19 and on most Tuesdays through the term we will have discussion sessions.

The aim of these sessions is to have a wide-ranging and informal discussion based on the readings FROM THE READINGS PACKAGE. For the discussion, don’t be intimidated if the meaning of some of the reading material is not clear to you. Keep in mind that pertinent questions are often as useful as thoughtful comments. Bring them to class and share them with everyone.

In addition, it is absolutely essential that you read the textbook, The Twentieth-Century and Beyond, in order to put the discussion readings in context. Doing this background reading before class is your responsibility.

Keep in mind that you cannot expect to earn a passing grade for the discussion portion of the mark without participating regularly in the discussions. You will be judged on the frequency and quality of your contributions. Attendance alone does not constitute participation.

For one assigned discussion through the term, each of you will be the designated leader for the session. What does it mean to be a discussion leader? Most importantly, you are responsible to raise relevant and thoughtful questions that help to encourage discussion that probes and develops key aspects of the readings.

Try to set up questions that are open-ended and that cause your colleagues to think more profoundly about the readings.

From my experience, two types of questions don't work well. One is "should" questions. These invite a moral response based on today's standards. Historians call these "presentist." These ask your fellow students to judge the past by our contemporary standards of morality. Our task as historians is to understand the past, not to judge it.

A second type of question that, in my experience doesn't work well is "what if" ones. "Would Germany have been better off if the Nazis had not seized power?" The only response we can have is "Sure, but the Nazis did seize power." A more fruitful question might be why the Nazis were able to seize power.

On the week you are the designated discussion leader, you will submit at least three questions to me via D2L. These questions must be submitted via the Dropbox function in D2L no later than 5:00pm on the day you're the designated discussion leader.

I'll circulate a list of sessions. Each of you will sign up to be discussion leader for one session.

In addition, in the same session where you're the discussion leader, you'll also submit an essay on the discussion subject. See below.

7. Essays

Each of you will hand in an essay based on the discussion readings for a particular day. By 5:00pm on the day you are the designated leader of the discussion session, you will submit through the dropbox function of D2L a written essay that answers the question that I pose for the discussion topic. Where will you find this question? It's in the table of contents of the reading package.

The source material for the essay is the articles in the reading package. No other sources need to be used. (You might, of course, need to do some background reading in the textbook or other sources in order to grasp the background of the readings.)

This essay will be 1000 words in total. The word limit is strict. I will deduct 10% from your grade for each 50 words (or part thereof) over 1000, beginning at 1050 words. So if you have 1051 words, the deduction is 10%; 1101 words, 20% etc.

At the opening of your essay provide a title for your essay, your name, the topic you are dealing with and the question you're addressing.

You must use footnotes or endnotes (NOT APA or MLA style references) to cite the source of the ideas, important information and direct quotations you include in this essay. Failure to use footnotes appropriately will result in a grade penalty of 10%. There is no need for a bibliography, as the discussion reading articles are your sources.

For correct History style follow the method used in the Camosun College History style guide, which is linked to the History section of the Camosun College Humanities Department website at http://camosun.ca/learn/programs/history/style_guide.pdf

As you can see, for the week you write an essay and are the leader for the discussion, a certain level of planning is needed. You'll have to read the articles in advance, write the essay on the articles, submit the essay and the questions before the discussion session and present thoughtful questions from the readings to your colleagues in the discussion.

Late submission of essays will result in a penalty of 5% per day.
