2. Intended Learning Outcomes

Through reading textbooks and primary source materials, hearing faculty lectures, participating in seminars, writing papers, making presentations, and performing tests, upon completion of this course the student will be able to:

1. Demonstrate a perspective on the development of the concept and practical meaning of human rights over the past three centuries, as this has developed in several countries, mostly European and North American.
2. Explain the democratic tradition and its meaning for citizens, including the nature of the state, political institutions and constitutions and the relations between majority and minorities.
3. Compare various national and international practices and declarations with regard to the protection of human rights.
4. Think critically about historical issues and writing by evaluating the arguments put forward by historians, weighing the evidence they present and making judgments about the strength of their arguments.
5. Distinguish the academic methods, outlook and scope of History from other disciplines.
6. Conduct research and communicate research results orally and in writing.

3. Required Materials

- (a) Micheline R. Ishay, The History of Human Rights: From Ancient Times to the Globalization Era 2nd edition (Berkeley CA: University of California Press; 2008)
 (b) History 250 Reading Package 2010-1 edition

4. Ground Rules

- Fairness to all requires that I stipulate that students will not be allowed to do “extra work” to make up for poor grades on any one assignment or combination of assignments.

- I do not “lecture to the textbook.” If you want to know how Micheline Ishay, the author of your textbook, assesses a particular historical issue, I encourage you to read the textbook (which you’ll be tested on). I might well have a different interpretation from her. My goal in the lecture is both to provide basic information about the events of the past and to acquaint you with some ways to understand those events.

- This course requires you to read regularly; some weeks there’s a fair amount of reading. Don’t fall behind. This especially applies to the textbook.

- While I allow laptop computers in lectures, I expect that you will use them to take notes on them, not surf the web, email friends, etc. In discussion sessions, where the focus is on participation, I do not allow the use of laptops.

- Because students have not used their technology responsibly in the past, I am forced to require that all cell phones and other similar implements of distraction REMAIN OFF during all classes.

5. Desire 2 Learn (D2L) component

Each of you has access to Desire 2 Learn, Camosun College’s Learning Management System, which will be used for several aspects of this course – written assignments and discussion leadership questions, which will be submitted through the Dropbox function in D2L; viewing grades, including the weekly discussion participation grade and the discussion leadership grades; accessing some of the discussion readings; viewing the lecture outlines; and keeping up with news about the course. Please sign in immediately and check into it frequently.

Signing in to D2L: Once you’re registered in this course, use your computer to go to the following web location: <http://online.camosun.ca> The sign-in process is simple and is described on the opening page of the D2L site.

6. Discussions

Beginning on Thursday, January 20 and on most Thursdays through the term we will have discussion sessions. Please ensure that you attend every session and join in the discussion.

The aim of these sessions is to have a wide-ranging and informal discussion based on sections in the READING PACKAGE (except on January 20, which includes some textbook material). For the discussion, don't be intimidated if the meaning of some of the reading material isn't clear to you. Keep in mind that pertinent questions are often as useful as thoughtful comments. Bring them to class and share them with everyone.

Keep in mind that you can't expect to earn a passing grade for the discussion portion of the mark without participating regularly in the discussions. You will be judged on the frequency and quality of your contributions. Attendance alone doesn't constitute participation.

7. Discussion leadership

For one assigned discussion through the term, each of you will be the designated leader for the session. What does it mean to be a discussion leader? Most importantly, you are responsible to raise relevant and thoughtful questions for other students that help to encourage discussion that probes and develops key aspects of the readings.

Try to set up questions that are open-ended and that cause your colleagues to think profoundly about the readings.

From my experience, two types of questions don't work well. One is "should" questions. These invite a moral response based on today's standards. Historians call these "presentist." These ask your fellow students to judge the past by our contemporary standards of morality. Our task as historians is to understand the past, not to judge it.

A second type of question that in my experience doesn't work well is "what if" ones. "Would the Armenians have been able to avoid mass slaughter if the Ottoman Empire had not gone to war?" The only response we can have is: "We don't know. The Ottoman Empire did go to war and Armenians were slaughtered." A more fruitful question might be how WWI contributed to the massacre of the Armenians inside the Ottoman Empire.

On the week you are the designated discussion leader, you'll submit at least three questions to me via D2L. These questions must be submitted via the Dropbox function in D2L no later than 12:30pm on the day you're the designated discussion leader.

I'll circulate a list and have each of you sign up to be leader for one discussion.

In addition, in the same session where you're the discussion leader, you'll also submit an essay on the discussion subject. See below.

8. Essay

Each of you will hand in an essay based on the discussion readings for a particular day. By 12:30pm on the day you are the designated leader of the discussion session, you will submit in Microsoft Word format through the DROPBOX FUNCTION of D2L a written essay that answers the question that I pose for the discussion topic. Where will you find this question? It's in the table of contents of the reading package.

The source material for the essay is the articles in the reading package. No other sources need to be used. (You may well, of course, need to do some reading in the textbook or other sources in order to grasp the background of the readings.)

This essay will be 1000 words in total. The word limit is strict. I will deduct 10% from your grade for each 50 words (or part thereof) over 1000, beginning at 1050 words. So if you have 1051 words, the deduction is 10%; 1101 words, 20% etc.

At the opening of your essay provide 1) a title for your essay; 2) your name; 3) the topic you are dealing with; 4) the question you're addressing.

You must use footnotes or endnotes (NOT APA or MLA style references) to cite the source of the ideas, important information and direct quotations you include in this essay. Failure to use footnotes appropriately will result in a grade penalty of 10%.

For correct History footnote style follow the method used in the Camosun College History style guide, which is linked to the History section of the Camosun College Humanities Department website at http://camosun.ca/learn/programs/history/style_guide.pdf

An essay usually includes a bibliography, but in this case there is no need for one, as the discussion reading articles are your sources.

In order to give you a guide to reading the assigned articles and writing an essay based on them, I have loaded onto D2L two brief excerpts from How to Read a Paragraph and How to Write a Paragraph. (Content Section of D2L.) I suggest you consult them as a brief introduction to reading effectively and writing purposefully.

As you can see, for the week you write an essay and are the leader for the discussion, a certain level of planning is needed. You'll have to 1) read the articles in advance; 2) write the essay answering the question about the articles; 3) submit the essay and the questions via D2L before the discussion session; and 4) present thoughtful questions from the readings to your colleagues in the discussion.

Late submission of essays will result in a penalty of 5% per day.
