COURSE DESCRIPTION

Sociology of Deviance 250 is an examination of theories of deviance and social control, the historical forces that have shaped these theories, the research based on them, and a critical evaluation of their contribution to our understanding of the causes of deviance.

COURSE OBJECTIVE

One major objective is to introduce students to sociological perspectives and basic concepts in the sociological study of deviance and social control. Another is for students to develop a critical understanding of deviance and social control and their application in society.

INTENDED LEARNING OUTCOMES

1. The student will develop a broad social and historical sense of how theories and ideas about deviance and social control have changed and been understood over time from earlier pre-scientific approaches to the rationalism and science of the present day.
2. The student will develop a critical understanding of the major theoretical perspectives on deviance and social control including the Classical, Functionalist, Physiological, Social Learning, Interactionist, and Marxist theories and will be able to apply these various theoretical perspectives to the analysis and understanding of contemporary deviance and social control.
3. The student will develop an understanding of the social construction of knowledge about deviance that will allow them to critically assess presentations of deviance by various social control agencies including the mass media of film, television and the press.

GUIDELINES FOR DISCUSSION ASSIGNMENTS

These are four classes where students meet in smaller groups to discuss questions prepared by each student in the unit based on the assigned readings. Your completion of the assignments is necessary in order to participate in the discussions and debates. Please note that students must complete this assignment working on their own so that duplicate questions will be held at a minimum.

Please read carefully:

1. Read or research carefully the required material for each assignment. Follow the instruction given in this outline for each assignment. Each assignment will be explained in further detail in the week before the assignment is due. Keep your responses as concise as possible and wherever you can use your own words and avoid quoting directly from the reading(s).
2. Make a COPY of your TYPED RESPONSES and bring the original to class. Your TYPED RESPONSES are your admission ticket to the DISCUSSION ASSIGNMENT classes.
3. Once in your small groups, each student in turn should share their responses. Once everyone has gone, the small group will discuss and debate the issues raised and work together to produce one response to present to the class and explain how they came to a consensus. The purpose of the debate is NOT to win arguments but rather to help each other understand the material better and hopefully in an enjoyable manner. It is essential to have a useful exchange of views in which each member of the unit participates fully. You cannot participate meaningfully unless you are prepared. This is why YOU WILL NOT BE ADMITTED unless you have prepared your responses prior to class. This rule will be strictly enforced to avoid students being unprepared and hindering the efforts of other students.
5. Students will receive a mark out of 5 for each of the 4 Discussion Assignments. Grading will be based on the quality of the response and completion of each aspect of the assignment. In order to be fair to all students the following conduct will be penalized:
 - depositing your questions with the instructor or sending them with another student and therefore not participating in the discussions (-2 marks).
 - The late submission of questions without a satisfactory excuse (-2 marks).
 - failing to complete the assignment on your own (-1 mark)
 - having questions that are not typed (-2 marks)
