COURSE GUIDELINES & EXPECTATIONS

It is expected that you will approach this course with curiosity and awareness. It is expected that you will explore music that may be unfamiliar to you and quite different from the music you like. It is expected that you will approach topics with respect, even those which may be difficult for you to work with, and that you will ask for relief if you ever feel a topic places you in an uncomfortable position. It is expected that you will attend each and every synchronous class session and participate both fully and enthusiastically in the discussion throughout the entirety of the session. It is expected that you will complete the homework with diligence and on schedule, and that you will refer to feedback received to foster your best learning. I encourage you to ask questions, seek assistance, engage in conversation, and to assume there is usually a way to solve a problem and perhaps even remake the course materials to meet you where you are and enhance your learning.

The course is intense! The materials take a long time to cover and prepare during a week – music is as long as it is and can't be made shorter. And you may be out of your comfort zone, familiarity, or area of interest for much of the material. I encourage you to be brave and to be curious.

As you plan for the course, please be aware that there is usually a direct correlation between attendance and participation at the weekly synchronous session and success on the homework, and a direct correction between success on homework (timeliness, attention to the work, and response to feedback) and performance on the exams. Attending each class and completing each homework assignment on-time usually makes for a strong performance on the exams. Skipping class, avoiding participation in class sessions, turning in homework late or not at all usually makes for weak performance on the exams. Understand this is entirely in your own hands.
