Upon completion of the course the student will be able to:

1. Identify and describe fundamental philosophical problems, along with the classical philosophical answers to these problems.
2. Distinguish among various philosophical theories.
3. Identify key periods and concepts in the (philosophical) history of ideas.
4. Critically analyze an argument philosophically by identifying its premise and conclusion and by assessing its strengths and weaknesses.

3. Required Materials

(a) Texts

John Perry, Michael Bratman, John Martin Fischer. Introduction to Philosophy: Classical and Contemporary Readings. 8th Edition. Oxford University Press, 2019.

4. Course Content and Schedule:

Key Topics:

Philosophy begins with wonder. Philosophical reflection reveals that things that in our day-to-day lives we take for granted as obvious and familiar, are actually more mysterious and problematic than we realize. Philosophical questions and problems arise when we stop simply taking things for granted and instead start reflecting on them. Here are some of the questions that arise when we start to wonder at things in this way, and that we'll look at in this course:

- What is the scope of theoretical knowledge, and how does theory relate to practice?
- What is the nature of reality?
- What are the sources and limits of our knowledge?
- What are we? What is the nature of the mind? What is its relation to the body?
- What is a good person? What are the sources of value?
- How does philosophical truth relate to scientific truth? Are there value-free, theory-neutral scientific facts?
- Can we rationally justify belief in God? Can we reconcile the existence of an all-knowing, all-good, and all-powerful God with the presence of evil in the world?

Expectations for Student Behaviour:

Lectures:

Pre-recorded lectures will be posted every Thursday by 2 pm on the D2L course site. In order to be successful in this class, you will need to log in to the course D2L website at least three times per week in order to access course materials and to participate actively in the class. Students are expected to view all pre-recorded lectures and develop class and study notes on the basis of the lectures.

Readings:

Moreover, students are expected to read all assigned materials before contributing to the discussion forum and before completing any other assignments. These are challenging and richly-layered texts. Thus, aim to read each assigned work at least twice: first, read it once over to get a general overview of the topic, and then re-read it at least one time in order to closely analyze the different steps in the argument/s presented and see if they hold up under scrutiny.

Discussions:

The course also includes a discussion component, which acts as our seminar. Every second Friday at 2 pm, a new discussion question is posted on the course site (under "Discussions"). Discussion topics close after two weeks.

On the discussion forum, students are expected to post one response to that week's question, as well as reply to one other student's post. Students must make 7 posts in total in response to the bi-weekly discussion prompts, as well as 7 replies in total to other students. Posts and replies will each be graded out of 10 points.

Students are expected to engage respectfully with all opposing views presented in class discussions. The goals are: to develop critical thinking and debate skills by engaging with views that we may initially find to be deeply counterintuitive, to develop stronger argumentative writing skills, and to learn to provide support for our views.

There will also be a Question Forum. On this forum, people are invited to post any questions they have about any of the course content. I encourage people to take a stab at answering any questions their peers post. Thus, if you feel that you know the answer, don't be shy, and try and answer! You won't be graded on the correctness of your responses. However, by contributing questions and answers to the question forum, you can accrue bonus marks that will be taken into account when adjusting your final grade.

Virtual Office Hours:

The course content can be challenging; if it weren't, it wouldn't be philosophy! However, do not feel like you have to struggle through it alone. That is why I am here to help. Please do not hesitate to make an appointment to have a video conference with me. Bring all your questions and perplexities, all your confusions and frustrations with the content, and together we'll figure out how to bring clarity to it all. The sooner you contact me with questions about areas you may be struggling with, the better I can help you. I encourage each student to make at least one appointment with me this term.

Also, please email me any time if you require any clarification at all, or if you just wish to chat about philosophy!

Tentative Schedule:

A tentative schedule, listing the particular topics to be covered and the dates for assignments, is provided below. The assigned readings for each week are presented after each bullet point, and the dates that the lectures will be posted on D2L are included in brackets after the week number. The dates for discussions and assignments are also listed. For guidance on strategies for reading philosophy, see: <http://www.jimpryor.net/teaching/guidelines/reading.html>

Every effort is made to ensure that we stick to the schedule; however, it may require amendment as the course progresses. If that occurs, the instructor will inform students by email as soon as is practically possible. Please note that students are responsible for keeping track of any such changes by regularly checking their emails and the news posted on the course site.

Instructions for Assignments:

- Start assignments early. Edit them before submitting them. First drafts of philosophy papers are always terrible.
- Submit all completed assignments in the “Assignments” section of our D2L course site.
- Grading criteria for all assignments will be based on the “Guidelines for Philosophical Writing” document, which will be provided on the D2L site.
- All assignments test your understanding of content covered in this class. You may, of course, supplement course content with external (properly cited) materials. However, assignments should show evidence of engagement with the material as covered in class. That being said, be sure to explain the content in your own words, rather than merely replicating lectures.
- Plagiarism aside, I strongly discourage people from relying on Google to look up material for this class. The chances that you will find quality discussions of material in this class online are very slim. The internet entries for philosophy are a very mixed bag. Hence, if you wish to do well on your assignments, do all the readings, watch all the lectures, and come to me with any questions about the material that you have well before you start crafting your assignments.

- In-text citations for quotes, paraphrasing, and references must be consistent with either MLA or APA standards. Students are responsible for ensuring that all assignments include proper citations. See the following link for guidance on citation styles: <https://camosun.libguides.com/cite>
- You must submit your own work. Unless otherwise specified, no collaborating is permitted on any of the assignments. Any collaborated work will be considered in violation of the Student Conduct Policy and will receive a grade of 0. <http://camosun.ca/about/policies/education-academic/e-2-student-services-and-support/e-2.5.pdf>
- All assignments (including discussions) will be carefully checked for all forms of cheating. You are responsible for familiarizing yourself with the college's policy on plagiarism; ignorance is no excuse. Any assignment that violates this policy will receive a grade of 0 and will be reported to the department chair: <http://camosun.ca/about/policies/education-academic/e-2-student-services-and-support/e-2.5.1.pdf>

Extensions and Late Assignments:

Students are allowed an automatic extension of a maximum of 5 days. No justification or documentation is required in order to get these 5 extension days. However, there is no extension for discussions. In order to extend the deadline for any assignment, write "claiming # extension days for this assignment" in the top left-hand corner of the assignment above your name. Students can claim these 5 extension days in any combination: e.g., they can use them all for one assignment, or use portions thereof to extend the deadline for different assignments. Note: if you're trying to extend the deadline for an assignment by a portion of a day (e.g. one hour), that will count as a full extension day. Also note: all assignments must be submitted by the end of the final exam period, April 27, 2021. No extension is allowed past this date.

Any assignments that are handed in late (i.e. after all 5 of the extension days are used) will lose 10% per 24 hours. Assignments that are submitted more than 2 days (48 hours) late will receive a grade of 0.

6. Grading System

- Competency Based Grading System
