COURSE GUIDELINES & EXPECTATIONS

There are a number of different components to this course

Lectures: The weekly in-person lectures will cover a variety of natural events and how their occurrences potentially threaten humans and their settlements. The classroom whiteboard and PowerPoint slides will be used to explain the mechanisms and potential impacts of each of these natural phenomena and there will be electronic notes and links to supplement the face-to-face lecture.

D2L: D2L is Camosun's learning support software and it allows you to access lecture notes, electronic lab exercises, hand in your assignments digitally, track your mark, and be alerted to upcoming due dates or changes in assignments. It is advantageous to login to the course D2L site at least weekly to ensure you are on track with your learning.

Labs: There will be ten lab exercises assigned this term. These activities are designed to practically apply some of the tools of hazards assessment. Due dates will be one week from the date the lab is assigned, unless otherwise specified, and your completed assignment can be uploaded to the 'Assignments' section of D2L or handed in at the start of lab class each week. Late assignments will not be accepted once marked assignments have been handed back.

Event Timeline: In mid-February, I will ask you to begin creating an event summary for an assigned natural disaster or catastrophe that has happened in the last century. You will then prepare a well-written, tightly edited summary including an appropriate photos and links that will be uploaded to a digital timeline by mid-March.

Tests: There will be three theory tests this term: the first on Thursday, February 17th, the second on Thursday, March 24th, and the third on Thursday, April 14th. Each test will contain a series of short answer, true or false, multiple choice and long answer questions that will cover the lecture and lab content of the course. You will be provided with online lecture quizzes so that you can practice in advance of the tests.
